DISTANCE LEARNING

Background

The District operates a comprehensive distributed learning program. The program offers government funded courses and programs for students who are ordinarily resident in British Columbia. Our programs include elementary, secondary, and adult graduation.

Procedures

1. Distributed learning takes place outside of the traditional school classroom when a learner is primarily at a distance from the educator and school.
2. Students often choose distributed learning because a particular course is not available to them or because of a learning preference.
3. Distributed learning is primarily offered online using a variety of software tools such as Moodle to allow students to access the curriculum and to interact with teachers.
